Introduction

I owe much gratitude to Mr Hans Keukelaar, honorary chairman of the "Nieuwpoort Historical Society".

Nieuwpoort, in The Netherlands, is a 12th-17th century fortress town on the River Rhine-Lek in the western part of The Netherlands. Nieuwpoort's location is not far from the famous windmill area around the village of Kinderdijk. The dike of the river cuts our small Nieuwpoort Town into two parts. North from the river-dike there is an old Outer Harbour, south from it an old Inner Harbour. In the olden days farmers sold their products in the area of the Inner Harbour. Nowadays the Outer Harbour as well as the Inner Harbour are mainly admired and used by tourists. A bird's eye view of Nieuwpoort, about 1975:
