About the author Dirk Teeuwen MSc

South Africa 2011, Drakensbergen (near Lesotho border)

Let me introduce myself! My name is Dirk Teeuwen. I am married for a long time. I am a senior lecturer at the Rotterdam University (Hogeschool Rotterdam), an academy of advanced and higher vocational, as well theoretical, education for 18+ in The Netherlands.

I got my MSc degrees at Erasmus University in Rotterdam: economics, business economics, social / economic history and subsidiaries like actuarial mathematics and pedagogical psychology. More text on page 2.

South-Africa 2008, Coffee Bay's Beauty

I travel a lot and I have been travelling on historical research all over Indonesia many times as well as the U.S., India, Thailand, Malaysia, Sri Lanka, South Africa, Ghana, Namibia, etc. I have a special interest in Indonesia, the old south of the U.S., South-Africa and its Boers. Dutch history as an inspiration is very important to me.

My chief purpose is to develop sites which could serve as a meeting place of visitors interested in similar subjects.

Bangkok 2005, Asian beauty and elegance (I refer to the girl.)

Holland 2010, winter near the windmill area around the village of Kinderdijk (search internet!)
